A Line Has Two

Damien Ricketson (music), Christopher Wallace-Crabbe (poetry)

A Line Has Two is a striking sonic-literary spectacle that explores impermanence and the passing of time. The sell-out premiere of A Line Has Two at the Sydney Opera House was described by the press as creating "a sense of erotic longing... full of delicious treats for the ears and eyes" (RealTime). A Line Has Two is preceded by In God's Esperanto, a new work that revives an ancient language in an ironic search for universal communication.
